THE RED TAG SALE

Goes Merrily Along

What does it mean to you? It means prices almost cut in half. It means that people are just becoming aware of the fact. It means to us a clearing up of our stock, an expanse in our methods of doing business. When we bought our present stock of Furnishings it was expanse always before our eyes that gave us nerve to buy as liberally as we did.

Open up your pocketbook and expend enough to take advantage of our Red Tag Sale. They seldom come, but while here you cannot afford to ignore them.

The front in yesterday's Times in regard to the lighting contest should have stated that the Roughers defeated the Lumpers by a score of 6 to 1, winning two of the three strings.

We are not making overmuch noise about our special prices, but one point we want to make plain. We are cutting prices to induce our buyers to buy now whatever they will need during the month of January. Then, Brady.

The lighting report of the city as presented by the lighting committee and compared with the report of 1935 furnishes chance for error. In the 1935 report the cost of the interior lighting of city buildings was not included in the total as printed, so that the difference between the lighting expense of the two years would be only a comparatively small increase in 1936.

The fairytale called "The Gingerbread Man" was presented at the opera house last evening by an excellent company and was well received by a large audience. The fairytale is both grotesque and satirical, full of opportunities for the work of the funny men and for the display of vocal powers. In both of these departments did the participants do good work, while the scenic effects and costumes added much to the beauty of the play. The parts which seemed to take best were the song "Nursery Rhymes," as sung by James Fenimore Lee, the gingerbread man, and Anna Lloyd, who took the part of the village tomboy. Winnifred Florence, who made a handsome Jack Hunter, also pleased when she sang "Moon, Moon, Moon," with chorus. The next attraction at the opera house will be "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," on Friday, January 23.
